HUNTON WILL CASE.

It was Decided in the Supreme Court of Appeals Yesterday.

sit east Broad street. The order entered in the matter directs that the same shall not take effect if John Mitchell, Jr., the editor, or some one for him shall within ten days deposit to the credit of the Court in the State Bank of Virginia the Must Have Facilities for Rest and Food-Two Land Suits.

Yesterday was opinion day in the Su preme Court of Appeals of Virginia, and four decisions were repleced. The most important was that in the case of the sapeake and Ohio Unitway Company against the American Exchange Bank for T. F. Jamison & Co. This was a writ of error to the judgment of the Circuit Court of the city of Lynchburg, giving damages to the plaintiffs for injury al to have been done to two carloads of horses and mules while being transported over the defendant's line complainant alleged bad handling and inattention to the accessities of the animals while en route from Kentucky Virginia, and that the borses did not have space and opportunity for rest. The opinion of the Court of Appeals. which was prepared by Judge Buchanan, gives much of the testimony before the lower tribunal, and says that there is vidence showing that the defendant's train was delayed for some hours west of the Ohio river and that the company was prevented from unloading the stock for more than sixty hours. The court soids in its decision that although the hoids in its decision that although the contract by which the piantiff undertook to load, feed, water, and unload the stock at his own risk and expense may have been a valid and briding contract, it was the duty of the defendant company to provide suitable and safe facilities for loaling and unloading the stock and for watering and feeding them while being carried over its line. The court finds no error in the proceedings of the lower court, and affirms its judgment.

An Interesting Will Case.

ie opinion in the will case of Gaskin and others against Huxton was a very interesting one. It was prepared by Judge Buchanan. The decision depended upon the proper construction of the provisions of the will of William Hunton, deceased, which stipulated that one piece of land should be equally divided between two of his sons, and that certain city property in New Baltimore should be divided between two other sons, etc., and that after these divisions, and a certain apportionment to Midred Jane Hunton, daughter of the deceased, the residue of the property be equally divided among the four sons and one daughter of the deceased. The will further provides, however, that if either should die before the division, or without an heir, the estate of such an one should be equally divided among the living children. The opinion states that two of the ind others against Hurton was a very

The opinion states that two of the sons and the daughter died without lessuand that one of the other sons died leaving children. The contention of the appelice was that the four sons and ing children. The contention of the appeliee was that the four sons and the daughter took a fee simple estate in the lands, and an absolute cetate in the personality bequeathed, while the appellants contended that the whole estate was taken subject to what may be called the residuary clause of the will. The words used by the testator in that portion of his will in which the general or principal distribution of his estate was made were appropriate words for creating an absolute estate and all that were necessary for that perpose. By the subsequent provision of the will the testator directed what must be done with the residue. The court discusses this feature of the instrument as follows: "This provision of the will does not say that if either of the children should die before the division or distribution provided for in the will, then his share should be divided among the other children; but it says, after the above-neutioned divisions and distributions are should be divided among the other children; but it says, after the abovementioned divisions and distributions are made the residue of the estate is to be divided equally between them within a year after the testator's death; but if either should die before the division, then his share should go to the surviving children. The division referred to must mean the division of the residue of his estate provided for in this portion of his will, and the limitations contained in that provision only apply to the residue of the estate disposed of by it. This, we think, is the natural and proper construction of the residuary clause or portion of the will. At least, it is not clear that the testator intended by this latter provision of his will clause or portion of the will. At least, it is not clear that the testator intended by this latter provision of his will to diminish or limit the absolute estate created by the former provision, and this being so, the result is the same as if it was clear that he did not intend to limit or diminish it.

"We are of the opinion, therefore, that each of the children of William Hunton, deceased, took under his will a feesimple estate in the lands devised them, and an absolute estate in the personal property bequeathed them, except in the property devised and bequeathed them in the residuary provision of his will—in which last property they took an estate which last properly they took an estate subject to be defeated by the death of either before the division provided for in that clause had been made, or in the event of either dying without issue." The construction placed upon the will by the Circuit Court of Fauquier was therefore affirmed.

Two Cases Involving Land.

Two Cases Involving Land.

Judge Keith prepared and presented the opinion in the case of Blackford against Rogers, from the Circuit Court of Princess Anne county. This was an action of trespass, quare clausum fregit, involving 983 acres of land left by Dr. Rogers to his two sons—George T. and Raiph L. Rogers. Upon the death of the latter, George T. Rogers instituted a chancery suit for partition against the heirs at law of his deceased brother. The land was sold in four parcels, and litigation ensued. After discussing the case fully the opinion states: "The evidence tends to show possession in the defendant in error at the time cossing the case fully the opinion states:

"The evidence tends to show possession in the defendant in error at the time of the alleged trespass, and negatives the claim of possession, actual or constructive, in the plaintiff in error. We are of the opinion therefore that the verdict of the jury and the judgment of the Court are without error, and must be affirmed."

The fourth, and last, opinion of the day was handed down by Judge Harrison, in the case of Darling against Cumning, from the Circuit Court of Elizabeth City county. The property at issue in this case was about 162 acres of land near Newport News, with which Daniel Comming died selaed. James 8. Darling claimed that Cumming had made a sale of the land to him during Cumming's life, but the lower court held that such was not the case, and its decree was affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

ASTONISHED AND MORTIFIED.

General Lee's Birthday and the Virginia House of Delegates.

Confederate Veterans, of Milledgeville,

Ga., held to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of General Robert E. Lee, resolutions were adopted, which, after reciting the action of the Virginia House of Delegates in refusing to adjourn in honor of the anniversary, reads as folows:

"It is, therefore, resolved by this Camp of Confederate Veterans, That they learn from the above with astonishment, mortification, shame, and pity, that the native State of General Robert E. Lee refuses to keep green the memory of her noblest son; that son who sheds bonor upon her rather than receives it; that son who refused to draw his sword until she called.

fused to draw his sword until she called, and did not sheath it until he had covered Virginia and himself with honor and glory.

"Resolved, further, That the notorious fifty-three members of the Virginia House of Delegates are ungrateful and deserve the stored vengeance of Heaven, for their lack and want of appreciation for the memory of Robert E. Lee, the grandest character this world ever looked upon."
